FAQ Guide and Reflective Journal for New Teachers Jessica Ratliff-Gordon, This book is comprised of common questions new teachers have asked themselves in their minds or perhaps even aloud while venting in a break room somewhere Along with each thought provoking question are personal insights and reflective journal prompts meant to provide guidance and assistance when dealing with classroom stressors Topics Include To decorate or not to decorate Does my classroom have to have a theme Where do I put everything To what extent should I investigate the students on my roster before meeting them Why are these kids doing this to me Why won't this student talk to me What values should I be promoting in my classroom and what if they don't coincide with the values of a student's family? What kind of relationship should I have with my students' parents? How do I handle parent teacher conferences? How do I establish positive relationships with colleagues when I'm overwhelmed with my daily workload? How important is planning with others? Can't I just do my own thing? Should I hang out in the teachers' lounge and who should I sit by during staff meetings? When could I possibly manage to grade all of this? What if I'm not assigned to the content area or grade level I most want to teach? Technology is overwhelming. Where do I start? When is there time? Why are these kids so entitled? How do I address entitlement within my classroom? Am I ready to host a student teacher or volunteer to take on interns and student tutors? What's a growth mindset and do I have one? What should I expect from my assigned mentor or buddy teacher? How should I view my classroom observations and yearly evaluations? It's summer now, what?

A Guided Reflection Journal - 30 Day Teacher Practice

The Reflective Teacher Press, 2025-11-02 The 30 Day Teacher Practice Reflection Journal offers a calm and uplifting way for new and beginning teachers to build confidence, clarity, and consistency in their classroom practice. Created by educators who understand the challenges of early career teaching, this guided journal helps you pause, reflect, and grow without adding to your workload. Each daily page follows a simple and effective framework: Intention, What Happened, Tweaks. These prompts invite you to set a clear focus for the day, notice what worked, and identify one small improvement for tomorrow. This consistent pattern of reflection strengthens professional habits, promotes mindfulness, and builds genuine self-awareness. Weekly check-ins help you track progress and consolidate learning. Mindfulness pages encourage short pauses for breath and reset, offering small moments of brightness amid the busyness of school life. Grounded affirmations provide quiet encouragement and remind you that growth in teaching comes through reflection rather than perfection. Across the month, you will begin to see what truly matters in your teaching practice, the routines that support calm, the feedback that makes a difference, and the adjustments that reduce effort while improving outcomes. By Day 30, you will have a clear record of your own professional progress, including insights to keep patterns to strengthen and renewed energy for the term ahead. This journal is both a guide and a companion for professional renewal. It supports early career teachers who want a mindful rhythm in their teaching, a way to stay connected to their purpose, and a practical structure for ongoing growth. Practical Encouraging Bright Grounded in real classroom experience. Ideal for beginning teachers, graduate educators, and mentors who support those starting their teaching journey.
