Processes, Mechanisms and Solutions in Coastal Wetland to Adapt to Changing Environment

Qing Wang, Dongdong Shao, Yu Zhang, Qin Zhu, 2025-06-05. Coastal wetlands provide precious ecological services for us, like coastal protection, carbon storage, flooding mitigation, production, and so on. Mangrove, saltmarsh, sea grass, oyster reef, and coral reef are typical types of coastal wetland. Each type has its unique adaptive strategy to climate change through some processes and mechanisms. Some of them are well known to us, but most are unrecognized as they are far away from our living environment. Furthermore, in the context of climate change and anthropogenic influence, the external disturbance is more complicated and changeable, causing the responses of species and the related processes more secluded and unpredictable. Therefore, the multilevel processes or mechanisms in coastal wetland to adapt to climate change, as well as the solutions, is urgent and important to face the new challenges. Coastal wetlands lie in the transition zone between lands and seas, defending us from storms and floodings and providing important and valuable ecosystem services, such as carbon stock and biodiversity maintenance. However, coastal wetlands are vulnerable and are one of the most physically disturbed ecosystems on earth because they are always in hydrodynamic conditions under the interactions among tides, waves, runoffs, and so on. Furthermore, the combined impacts of climate change and human activities have caused more uncertainties and complexities on the environmental factors, which imposed unparalleled impacts on the diversity, distribution, and ecological performance of coastal wetland ecosystem globally.
