

EDUCATION IN THE WORKPLACE

These results provide evidence that our findings are consistent with other more general research suggesting students are engaged more for positive than negative affective outcomes.

EDUCATION MODULES: ENJOY AND ENTHUSIASM

More positive affective outcomes (enjoy and enthusiasm) were associated with an increased likelihood of positive affective outcomes. Likewise, a lower positive affect score suggested mostly neutral and negative affect outcomes (that students might be more indifferent than engaged for other EOCs, showing indifference or negative outcomes).
