Bodies Politics And African Healing The Matter Of Maladies In Tanzania:

Bodies, Politics, and African Healing Stacey A. Langwick, 2011-06-23 This subtle and powerful ethnography examines African healing and its relationship to medical science. Stacey A. Langwick investigates the practices of healers in Tanzania who confront the most intractable illnesses in the region including AIDS and malaria. She reveals how healers generate new therapies and shape the bodies of their patients as they address devils and parasites, anti-witchcraft medicine, and child immunization. Transcending the dualisms between tradition and science, culture and nature, belief and knowledge, Langwick tells a new story about the materiality of healing and postcolonial politics. This important work bridges postcolonial theory, science, public health, and anthropology.

Making and Unmaking Public Health in Africa Ruth J. Prince, Rebecca Marsland, 2013-11-15 Africa has emerged as a prime arena of global health interventions that focus on particular diseases and health emergencies. These are framed increasingly in terms of international concerns about security, human rights, and humanitarian crisis. This presents a stark contrast to the 1960s and 70s when many newly independent African governments pursued the vision of public health for all of comprehensive health care services directed by the state with support from foreign donors. These initiatives often failed, undermined by international politics, structural adjustment, and neoliberal policies, and by African states themselves. Yet their traces remain in contemporary expectations of and yearnings for a more robust public health. This volume explores how medical professionals and patients, government officials and ordinary citizens, approach questions of public health as they navigate contemporary landscapes of NGOs and transnational projects, faltering state services, and expanding privatization. Its contributors analyze the relations between the public and the private providers of public health, from the state to new global biopolitical formations of political institutions, markets, human populations, and health. Tensions and ambiguities animate these complex relationships, suggesting that the question of what public health actually is in Africa cannot be taken for granted. Offering historical and ethnographic analyses, the volume develops an anthropology of public health in Africa. Contributors: Hannah Brown, P. Wenzel Geissler, Murray Last, Rebecca Marsland, Lotte Meinert, Benson A. Mulemi, Ruth J. Prince, Noëmi Tousignant, and Susan Reynolds Whyte.

Perspectives on Interculturality

M. Rozbicki, 2015-04-22 The intercultural occurs in the space between two or more distinct cultures that encounter each other, an area where meanings are translated and difference is negotiated. In this volume, scholars from diverse disciplines reflect on the phenomenon of interculturality and on the theoretical and methodological frameworks of interpreting it.

Evidence, Ethos and Experiment P. Wenzel Geissler, Catherine Molyneux, 2011-09-01 Medical research has been central to biomedicine in Africa for over a century and Africa, along with other tropical areas, has been crucial to the development of medical science. At present, study populations in Africa participate in an increasing number of medical research projects and clinical trials run by both public institutions and private companies. Global debates about the politics and ethics of this research are growing, and local concerns are prompting calls for social studies of the trial communities produced by this.

scientific work Drawing on rich ethnographic and historiographic material this volume represents the emergent field of anthropological inquiry that links Africanist ethnography to recent concerns with science the state and the culture of late capitalism in Africa Gathering Electronic Waste in Tanzania Samwel Moses Ntapanta,2024-12-16 Using Tanzania as a case study this book traces the lifecycle of electronic goods beyond their discard in the Global South to provide a deeper understanding of the informal sector s vital role in rethinking global discard circulations labour value and toxicity

Medicines That Feed Us Stacey A. Langwick,2026-01-02 Through an ethnography of plant based healing and sustainable farming practices in Tanzania Stacey A Langwick examines the relationship between toxicity and remedy in the face of the intertwined health and environmental crises that shape life in the twenty first century Chinese Medicine in East Africa Elisabeth Hsu,2022-07-08 Based on fieldwork conducted between 2001 2008 in urban East Africa this book explores who the patients practitioners and paraprofessionals doing Chinese medicine were in this early period of renewed China Africa relations Rather than taking recourse to the placebo effect the author explains through the spatialities and materialities of the medical procedures provided why apart from purchasing the Chinese antimalarial called Artemisinin locals would try out their alternatively modern formulas for treating a wide range of post colonial disorders and seek their sexual enhancement medicines

Medicine in the Meantime Ramah McKay,2017-12-21 In Mozambique where more than half of the national health care budget comes from foreign donors NGOs and global health research projects have facilitated a dramatic expansion of medical services At once temporary and unfolding over decades these projects also enact deeply divergent understandings of what care means and who does it In Medicine in the Meantime Ramah McKay follows two medical projects in Mozambique through the day to day lives of patients and health care providers showing how transnational medical resources and infrastructures give rise to diverse possibilities for work and care amid constraint Paying careful attention to the specific postcolonial and postsocialist context of Mozambique McKay considers how the presence of NGOs and the governing logics of the global health economy have transformed the relations between and within bodies medical technologies friends kin and organizations that care requires and how such transformations pose new challenges for ethnographic analysis and critique

Medicines That Feed Us Stacey Ann Langwick,2026-02-10 Medicines That Feed Us examines the relationship between toxicity and remedy in the face of the intertwined health and environmental crises that have shaped the twenty first century Through ethnographic work with organizations that use plant based healing and farming practices in Tanzania Stacey A Langwick asks what does it mean to heal in a toxic world Langwick proposes the Tanzanian phrase dawa lishe or medicines that feed us as a system of understanding how plant medicines can better align bodies with the earth This conceptualization of medicine runs counter to Western medicine's conceptualization of health as separate from the earth and the modern agricultural industrial and land management practices that impact it. Rather than representing a return to traditional African healing, dawa lishe draws from both local and contemporary knowledges to craft a holistic approach to plant medicine as well as its production, distribution and administration. The practitioners and NGOs that Langwick follows offer alternative ways of living and dying, growing and decaying, composing and decomposing that acknowledge the interdependence of bodily and ecological health. Other-Worldly Mei Zhan, 2009-11-09 Traditional Chinese medicine is often portrayed as an enduring system of therapeutic knowledge that has become globalized in recent decades. In Other Worldly Mei Zhan argues that the discourses and practices called traditional Chinese medicine are made through rather than prior to translocal encounters and entanglements. Zhan spent a decade following practitioners, teachers and advocates of Chinese medicine through clinics, hospitals, schools and grassroots organizations in Shanghai and the San Francisco Bay Area. Drawing on that ethnographic research, she demonstrates that the everyday practice of Chinese medicine is about much more than writing herbal prescriptions and inserting acupuncture needles. Traditional Chinese medicine is also made and remade through efforts to create a preventive medicine for the proletariat world, reinventing it for cosmopolitan middle class aspirations. Produce clinical miracles, translate knowledge and authority, and negotiate marketing strategies and medical ethics. Whether discussing the presentation of Chinese medicine at a health fair sponsored by a Silicon Valley corporation or how the inclusion of a traditional Chinese medicine clinic authenticates the California appeal of an upscale residential neighborhood in Shanghai, Zhan emphasizes that unexpected encounters and interactions are not anomalies in the structure of Chinese medicine. Instead, they are constitutive of its irreducibly complex and open-ended worlds. Zhan proposes an ethnography of worlding as an analytic for engaging and illuminating emergent cultural processes such as those she describes. Rather than taking cultural difference as the starting point for anthropological inquiries, this analytic reveals how various terms of difference, for example traditional Chinese medicine and medicine, are invented, negotiated and deployed translocally. Other Worldly is a theoretically innovative and ethnographically rich account of the worlding of Chinese medicine.

Bodies and Politics, 2002 The Social Basis of Health and Healing in Africa Steven Feierman, John M. Janzen, 1992-09-22 These essays are an account of disease, health and healing practices on the African continent. The contributors all emphasize the social conditions linked to ill health and the development of local healing traditions from Morocco to South Africa and from the precolonial era to the present.

Bodies of Encounter Pablo Fernando Gómez Zuluaga, 2010 This dissertation explores African ideas and practices related to bodies, health, illness and death in the early modern Spanish Caribbean. African healing traditions were an essential part of the imagination of bodies, health, illness and death espoused by the early modern inhabitants of the Iberian Atlantic World. They were instruments of integration sharing and adaptation In the distinctively fluid and cosmopolitan societies and cultures of Spanish Caribbean cities Africans Europeans and their descendants developed a common ground for the conceptualization of their bodies nature and of the origins of health illness and death Drawing on material and documentary evidence from early modern Africa Europe and America my project demonstrates how African systems of belief and practices were seminal in the emergence of ideas about the body Furthermore it shows the central place of African mores in the rise of Spanish Colonial socio cultural structures in the Spanish Colonies in the Caribbean The Social Origins of Health and Healing in Africa
