

BODY TREK:

Using the terms below, fill in the blanks to complete the trek through the chemical organization in the human body.

Integral proteins	Ions	Nonmembranous	Matrix
Cell membrane	Cytosol	Extracellular fluid	Cilia
Intracellular fluid	ATP	Peripheral proteins	Proteins
Phospholipid	Sacculles	Protein synthesis	Organelles
Cell division	Lysosomes	Respiratory enzymes	Nucleus
Mitochondrion	Cristae	Golgi apparatus	Ribosomes
Chromosomes	Channels	Cytoskeleton	Nucleoli
Rough endoplasmic reticulum	Nuclear	Nuclear envelope	Nucleoplasm
		Endoplasmic reticulum

Robo is inhaled into the body via a deep inspiration while its human host is sleeping. The micro-robot immediately lodges in the trachea among a group of pseudostratified, ciliated, columnar epithelial cells. Robo's initial maneuver is to get into a position for entry into one of the cells. The robot radios control command, "Might need a life jacket." There appears to be a watery "moat" around each cell, most likely the (1) _____. The robot's location seems to be in jeopardy because of the presence of small "finger-like" projections, the (2) _____, which are swaying back and forth and threatening to "wash" the robot farther down into the respiratory tract. The robot's mechanical arm extends and grabs hold of the outer boundary of a cell, the (3) _____. Robo is instructed to "look for" (4) _____, which form (5) _____ large enough for the robot to gain entry into the cell. As it passes through the opening, its chemical sensors pick up the presence of a (6) _____ bilayer with integral proteins embedded in the membrane and (7) _____ attached to the inner membrane surface. Once inside, the trek through the cytosol or (8) _____ begins. Resistance to movement is greater inside the cell than outside because of the presence of dissolved nutrients, (9) _____, soluble and insoluble (10) _____, and waste products. The first "observation" inside the cell is what looks like a protein framework, the (11) _____, which gives the cytoplasm strength and flexibility. Formed structures, the (12) _____, are in abundance, some attached and others freely floating in the (13) _____. Robo's contact with some of the organelles is easy because they are (14) _____ while others may be difficult to get into because of the presence of a membrane. Structures such as the ribosomes, which are involved in (15) _____, and the centrioles, which direct strands of DNA during (16) _____, are noted quite easily as Robo treks through the cytosol. A small "cucumber-shaped" structure, a(n) (17) _____, is "sighted"; however, the robot's entry capabilities are fully taxed owing to the unusual double membrane. After penetrating the outer membrane, an inner membrane containing numerous folds called (18) _____ blocks further entry. The inner membrane serves to increase the surface area exposed to the fluid contents or (19) _____. The presence of (20) _____ attached to the folds would indicate that this is where (21) _____ is generated by the mitochondria. Robo senses the need for a quick "diffusion" through the outer membrane and back into the cytosol. The moving cytosol carries the micro-robot close to the center of the cell where it contacts the cell's control center, the (22) _____. Robo is small enough to pass through the double membrane, the (23) _____, because it contains (24) _____. Once inside, the environment is awesome! Nuclear organelles called (25) _____ engage in activities that would indicate that they synthesize the components of the (26) _____ since RNA and ribosomal proteins are in abundance. The fluid content of the nucleus, the (27) _____, contains ions, enzymes, RNA, DNA, and their nucleotides. The DNA strands form complex structures called (28) _____, which contain information to synthesize thousands of different proteins and control the synthesis of RNA. Robo leaves the nucleus by way of the ER or (29) _____ where it senses the manufacture of proteins at specific sites along the membrane, the (30) _____, or RER. Some of the synthesized molecules are stored, others will be transported along with the robot by transport vesicles that will deliver them to the (31) _____, a

Spelling Richard Madden, 1983 Teaching Science, 2006 Reading to Learn in Grades 5 to 12 Margaret Early, Diane J. Sawyer, 1984 Interpersonal Communication Through the Life Span Tricia S. Jones, Martin S. Remland, Rebecca Sanford, 2007

Communication scholars increasingly recognize the influence life stages have on communication. This book presents concepts from a unique life span orientation so that readers can gain a better understanding of the impact the life span has on interpersonal communication and relationships. The authors include an abundance of current theory and research and also incorporate scholarship from psychology and sociology. Section Two is organized around four specific life stages: early to middle childhood addresses topics such as emotional and conflict competence; adolescence to young adulthood examines identity, self-disclosure, how relationships form, and relationships outside the family; adulthood to middle adulthood covers marital and family communication and gender issues; elderly looks at multi-generational issues, grandparenting, communication challenges for the elderly, and romance and intimacy for the elderly.
