(Unit 5)

--Book 4/6/2020--

- Space and place= most important concepts for HUG
 - Space: Abstract topic in which it is the Earth with objects upon it. Activity Spaces are areas with daily activity occurring. Thinking Spatially= understanding connectivity, distribution, relationships, movement, growth, and change across a landscape
 - Place: less abstract than space. It does not have to be a place a person lives. There could be a sense of place in a certain area. Toponyms are assigned to these areas when human importance is identified. These names can reveal the historical interrelatedness of locations. Attributes of a place change over time. Over the long term, sequent occupancy is considered: in other words, the succession of groups and cultural influences through a place. Layers of sequence occupancy create a place-specific culture
- Area of bounded space- called regions. They are associated with categories. When considering the importance of an area of space it is important to consider why it matters.
- Scale= relationship of object or place to Earth as whole
 - Thought about in 2 ways:
 - Map Scale- describes the ratio of distance on map to distance in the real world in absolute terms
 - Relative Scale/Scale of Analysis- Describes the level of aggregation/ the level at which you group things together for the examination. Scales can range from individual or local to national or continental. Important to know and understand how to compare different scales
- TIP: Use scale modifiers on exam writing
- Regions: Formal, Functional, Vernacular. A place can be in several different regions
