

Release Notes

Welcome to Release 2015 of PGI Workstation™, PGI Server™, and the PGI CDK® Cluster Development Kit®, a set of compilers and development tools for 32-bit and 64-bit x86-compatible processor-based workstations, servers, and clusters running versions of the Linux operating system. PGI Workstation and PGI Server are also available for the Apple OS X and Microsoft Windows operating systems.

This document describes changes between previous releases of the PGI compilers and tools as well as late-breaking information not included in the current version of the PGI Compiler User's Guide.

1.1. Product Overview

PGI Workstation, PGI Server, and the PGI CDK include exactly the same PGI compiler and tools software. The difference is the manner in which the license keys enable the software.

1.1.1. Licensing Terminology

The PGI compilers and tools are license-managed. Before discussing licensing, it is useful to have common terminology.

- ▶ License - a legal agreement between NVIDIA and PGI end-users, to which users assent upon installation of any PGI product. The terms of the License are kept up-to-date in documents on pgroup.com and in the `$PGI/<platform>/<rel_number>` directory of every PGI software installation.
- ▶ License keys - ASCII text strings that enable use of the PGI software and are intended to enforce the terms of the License. License keys are generated by each PGI end-user on pgroup.com using a unique hostid and are typically stored in a file called `license.dat` that is accessible to the systems for which the PGI software is licensed.
- ▶ PIN - Personal Identification Number, a unique 6-digit number associated with a license. This PIN is included in your PGI order confirmation. The PIN can also be found in your PGI license file after `VENDOR_STRING=`.
