6 Procedure

6.1 General

The production planning manager controls the production resources through the resources management form(F-PL-01). Human resources are controlled based on the number of hours required and compared with available hours, and in case of manpower shortage, measures will be taken to provide manpower through overtime, night shifts, or temporary labor recruitment.

Ensuring that production equipment and tools are available are controlled from the preventive maintenance unit and in case of production equipment failure, equipment repair and preparation will be followed up.

The production planning manager will also track the supply of raw materials and financial resources from the purchasing and finance units.

6.2 Production schedule

Planning in this company is in two ways The first type is based on sending the customer order to the warehouse by the sales unit which according to the inventory of the final product in the warehouse, the delivery is performed, and the second is based on the customer order to produce a specific or changed product which may be part of the project orders under the R&D unit.

in type one order the warehouse manager when received an order from the sales unit at first check the inventory and then compare the products with the order the characteristics of products order such as the type of products, model, color, and etc.

When the available products and the received order match, the goods are delivered to the customer under the supervision of the planning unit.

when the products ordered are not in exist the planning is performed as the following;

If the ordered products are new or changed and there is no technical and system information about it, the order will be sent from the sales unit under the title of the new project, directly to the research and development unit (P-DD-15) and the R&D unit after completion Technical information including maps, purchase data, etc., and after confirming and validating these documents, purchase request will be sent to
