

End of Study: The Researcher's Responsibility

Topic	Definition
Market failure	A state where the market mechanism allocates resources and responsibilities in a way that is inefficient, meaning that the welfare of the whole society is not being maximized (or resource allocation is not efficient for other reasons, such as equity, stability).
Externalities	An externality is a cost or benefit that affects a third party who is not involved in the transaction. It can be either positive or negative. Externalities are often associated with market failure.
Public goods	Goods that are non-excludable and non-rivalrous. This means that one person's use of the good does not diminish another's, and no one can be excluded from using it. Examples include clean air, national defense, and knowledge.
Resource allocation	The process of distributing scarce resources among different uses. This can be done through the market mechanism, government intervention, or a combination of the two.
Government failure	A state where government intervention fails to improve the allocation of resources or to correct market failure. This can be due to a variety of factors, including imperfect information, bureaucratic inefficiency, and rent-seeking behavior.
Market failure	A state where the market mechanism fails to allocate resources efficiently. This can be due to a variety of factors, including externalities, public goods, and imperfect information.
Government failure	A state where government intervention fails to improve the allocation of resources or to correct market failure. This can be due to a variety of factors, including imperfect information, bureaucratic inefficiency, and rent-seeking behavior.
