Active Directory

The diagram illustrates the Microsoft Active Directory (AD) architecture. At the top center is a blue folder icon containing a white Windows logo. Below the folder, the text "Microsoft" is written in a small, faint font, followed by "Active Directory" in a large, bold, white sans-serif font. A central vertical line extends downwards from the folder icon. From this central line, several curved, light-gray lines branch out to the left and right, connecting to a series of blue circular icons. Each circular icon is divided into four quadrants: top-left is light blue, top-right is medium blue, bottom-left is dark blue, and bottom-right is white. There are nine of these circular icons in total, arranged in a network-like pattern that suggests a distributed system or a cloud environment.
