Detection and Estimation of Working Memory States and Cognitive Functions Based on Neurophysiological Measures Felix Putze, Christian Mühl, Fabien Lotte, Stephen Fairclough, Christian Herff, 2019-02-05 Executive cognitive functions like working memory determine the success or failure of a wide variety of different cognitive tasks such as problem solving navigation or planning Estimation of constructs like working memory load or memory capacity from neurophysiological or psychophysiological signals would enable adaptive systems to respond to cognitive states experienced by an operator and trigger responses designed to support task performance e g by simplifying the exercises of a tutor system when the subject is overloaded or by shutting down distractions from the mobile phone The determination of cognitive states like working memory load is also useful for automated testing assessment or for usability evaluation While there exists a large body of research work on neural and physiological correlates of cognitive functions like working memory activity fewer publications deal with the application of this research with respect to single trial detection and real time estimation of cognitive functions in complex realistic scenarios Single trial classifiers based on brain activity measurements such as electroencephalography functional near infrared spectroscopy physiological signals or eye tracking have the potential to classify affective or cognitive states based upon short segments of data For this purpose signal processing and machine learning techniques need to be developed and transferred to real world user interfaces The goal of this Frontiers Research Topic was to advance the State of the Art in signal based modeling of cognitive processes We were especially interested in research towards more complex and realistic

study designs for example collecting data in the wild or investigating the interaction between different cognitive processes or signal modalities Bringing together many contributions in one format allowed us to look at the state of convergence or diversity regarding concepts methods and paradigms Aviation and Human Factors Jose Sanchez-Alarcos,2019-06-19 Air safety is right now at a point where the chances of being killed in an aviation accident are far lower than the chances to winning a jackpot in any of the major lotteries However keeping or improving that performance level requires a critical analysis of some events that despite scarce point to structural failures in the learning process The effect of these failures could increase soon if there is not a clear and right development path This book tries to identify what is wrong why there are things to fix and some human factors principles to keep in aircraft design and operations Features Shows through different events how the system learns through technology practices and regulations and the pitfalls of that learning process Discusses the use of information technology in safety critical environments and why procedural knowledge is not enough Presents air safety management as a successful process but at the same time failures coming from technological and organizational features are shown Offers ways to improve from the human factors side by getting the right lessons from recent events
