

A photograph of a garden scene. In the foreground, there are green leafy plants growing in dark soil. In the background, there are more green plants and some yellow flowers. A person's arm is visible on the right side, reaching into the garden. The text is overlaid on a semi-transparent orange rectangle in the center.

Gardening prayers

Heavenly Father, as I tend to this garden, I am reminded of the sanctity and beauty of life and see Your goodness and grace. May the soil, seeds, and plants that sprout produce fruit, nourishing the body and soul. May this time spent in the garden be a moment with You in peace and reflection. Through Christ our Lord.

AMEN

Friedman, 2017-10-06 The southern women's reform movement emerged late in the nineteenth century several decades behind the formation of the northern feminist movement The Enclosed Garden explains this delay by examining the subtle and complex roots of women's identity to disclose the structures that defined and limited female autonomy in the South Jean Friedman demonstrates how the evangelical communities a church directed kin dominated society linked plantation farm and town in the predominantly rural South Family networks and the rural church were the principle influences on social relationships defining sexual domestic marital and work roles Friedman argues that the church and family more than the institution of slavery inhibited the formation of an antebellum feminist movement The Civil War had little effect on the role of southern women because the family system regrouped and returned to the traditional social structure Only with the onset of modernization in the late nineteenth century did conditions allow for the beginnings of feminist reform and it began as an urban movement that did not challenge the family system Friedman arrives at a new understanding of the evolution of Victorian southern women's identity by comparing the experiences of black women and white women as revealed in church records personal letters and slave narratives Through a unique use of dream analysis Friedman also shows that the dreams women described in their diaries reveal their struggle to resolve internal conflicts about their families and the church community This original study provides a new perspective on nineteenth century southern social structure its consequences for women's identity and role and the ways in which the rural evangelical kinship system resisted change

Augspach, 2004 The purpose of this study is to examine a few literary gardens of romance from the close of the 12th to the first half of the 13th century in light of the development of the figure of the enclosed garden as a female space that is not owned by a man but rather by the woman who inhabits it In this scenario the woman is consistently seen as other while the narrative directs the reader's attention to the point of view of the man who is confronted with this inverted state of affairs This unnatural situation sets up a power play between the genders that will be resolved only once the woman and her garden are brought to heel The exception to this rule is the Virgin Mary whose wonderful garden possesses no unnaturalness or
