

CHAPTER (1) ACCOUNTING EQUATION

1.1 Accounting is concerned with:

- recording data
- classifying and summarizing data
- communicating what has been learnt from the data.

The primary objective of accounting is to provide information for decision-making.

1.2 What is bookkeeping?

Bookkeeping is the process of recording data relating to accounting transactions in the accounting books.

1.3 How financial statements contribute towards meeting the needs of different stakeholders and users

A business has many different stakeholders who may each have a different interest in the business. For instance:

- Managers. These are the day-to-day decision makers. They need to know how well things are progressing financially and about the financial status of the business. They want to ensure they are going to meet their targets. They will be required to monitor income and expenditure and deal with any anomalies from budget
- Owners/Directors – the invested interest of the owners and directors will be to ensure the business is making a profit and is financially stable in order to meet its financial obligations and commitments to staff and external agencies, such as bank, tax agencies as well as customer needs.
- Employees – will be interested in the position of the company for their job security and future wage rises.
- Customers – will be interested to ensure the business will continue so they can meet the customer's obligations.
- Suppliers – will want to be sure that the business is financially sound before deciding whether to supply them with goods and services.
- Competitors – will want to see if the business is performing well and, if so, what financial position they are in. They will also be interested in the market share of their competitors.
- Investors – if the company requires investment then the accounts will show potential investors how they are performing and the financial position of the business.
- Local community– if the business employs a lot of people from the local community, or if they support the local community through charitable donations then the community will want the business to continue trading in the future.
