

Chapter 10-Crime and Justice: Periodic Assessments

Any society that accepts social contract theory would have to make sure that the law is applied fairly, and that the society's government has a legitimate right to do so. In other words, the government must have the power to make and enforce laws that are in the best interest of the society.

1. The government's responsibility is to make sure that the law is applied fairly, and that the society's government has a legitimate right to do so.

Section 1: Assessment

What good are laws if they're not applied?

Section 2: Assessment

What's a consequence of not applying laws?

Section 3: Assessment

What's the difference between the police and the military?

1. The police and the military are both government agencies, but they have different roles and different goals.

Police are responsible for maintaining order in a community, and prevent illegal activities. They would take action through law enforcement, which is what they're responsible for. The military, on the other hand, is responsible for fighting wars. They would take action through war, which is what they're responsible for. However, it's important to remember that both are important to the society.

2. The police are the criminal justice system, and the military is the national defense system.

Section 4: Assessment

What's a consequence of the government not applying laws?

Section 5: Assessment

What's a consequence of the government not applying laws?

1. The government's responsibility is to make sure that the law is applied fairly, and that the society's government has a legitimate right to do so.

2. If the government is responsible for maintaining order in a community, then it must have the power to do so. This means that the government must have the power to make and enforce laws that are in the best interest of the society.
