

Building reinforced, diaphragm and wide plan freestanding walls

This Guide, for builders, designers and planners, presents rule of thumb guidance for stable construction of a range of common brick or blockwork wall types. Separate values for wall height and foundation width are given for increasing levels of exposure across the UK and solutions can be compared with complementary advice published for simple plan unreinforced walls (Good Building Guide 14).

The Guide includes notes on materials selection and good construction practice. The need for good supervision is stressed, particularly with reinforced walls, where a number of quite different building operations are involved which require careful coordination and execution.

The advice in this guide allows walls to be built up to a height of 2.5 m. Before starting you should check local planning restrictions, which may limit walls to a maximum height of 2 m or less.

it results in sharp increases of the temperature range for the outer cladding causing a lot of damage and by the same token stabilises the inner leaf opening the way for heating economies There have been some disastrous fires in cavities causing several deaths and this risk is dealt with too Curtain walls have a chapter to themselves and so do timber walls and so many problems have developed in applied finishes and in doors and windows that these too have their own chapters Finally roofs flat and pitched in two separate chapters Flat roofs have a bad press and people are still suspicious about them but we now know how to make them long lasting and handsome while pitched roofs have had a good press but sometimes don't deserve it The corrosion of metal finishes especially lead has bedevilled pitched roofs and given some terrible shocks on one roof lead that was heavy enough to give 100 years protection failed in 10 months following official recommendations The author is a well known consultant and is an authority in the field of oddities in buildings Book provides a good thinking base for design decisions about new buildings Vital for architects engineers surveyors and clients BRE News of Construction Research, 1984 Low-Energy Cooling Technologies for Buildings Savvas A.
