Stanley Kubrick, one of the most important and influential filmmakers of the last century and director of cinematic masterpieces such as Clockwork Orange, Lolita and 2001 Space Odyssey, fits the diagnosis. Undoubtedly, Patricia Highsmith, renowned writer of crime fiction, particularly the Ripley novels, suffered from it. Likewise, Charles Darwin, one of the most influential and revolutionary scientist of all times, as well as Bertrand Russell, foremost philosopher and mathematician of the 20th century, meet diagnostic criteria for Asperger syndrome. Other less well known personalities such as the Swiss writer Robert Walser, Joy Adamson, famous for her work with animals in Africa, the controversial British politician Enoch Powell, the gifted mathematician Kurt Gödel and the American child prodigy William James Sidis are also linked to the condition. Some individuals with Asperger Syndrome are extremely successful in their area of expertise and lead fulfilling lives despite or because of their condition while others are considered failures and life for them is an endless struggle on the margins of society For some Asperger syndrome appears to be a gift for others a curse In order to address this issue the authors analyse the life histories of ten historical and contemporary figures from the world of literature film politics science philosophy and mathematics who had Asperger syndrome against the backdrop of neuropsychological theories of autism Asperger syndrome latest neurobiological research data and current interpretation of special gifts and assets They also advance a new hypothesis of Asperger syndrome as a disorder of the social self based on right hemisphere dysfunction and demonstrate that the impact of the disorder on the development of the Self of each individual manifests itself in very distinct ways

Who Needs Friends? Laurie Leventhal-Belfer,2013-04-12 Who Needs Friends A Guide to The Friends

Program An intervention program that helps young children on the Autism Spectrum Asperger's Disorder and their Parents explore and expand their social world For the past 15 years colleagues and graduate students have asked us if we have a handbook about our program that they could share with their trainees Parents have also inquired about a handbook that they can share with family members and their children's teachers So here it is a reader friendly guidebook to The Friends

Program The program strives to replicate a preschool and elementary school setting to capture the challenges that these children experience at school across social settings such as their home and in after school activities The program is unique in that the parents experienced interpreters of their children's social world attend every session We learned early on that their observations and comments made during the parent's group provided the clinicians with insight that might otherwise take months to acquire A parent immediately knew which movie or video their child was referring to during the table discussion They understood why a child may look distressed at the start of a session or what they were eager to share in the group The program runs on the academic calendar since we have learned that different issues arise at different times such as the opening of the school year holidays and tests Our curriculum is not standardized but molds to fit the issues the children are currently raising i.e making new friends keeping your cool bullying and collaboration The goal of this program is to enhance

a child's Social Communication capacity for shared symbolic Play understanding of Emotions and Emotional Regulation verbal Communication and Sensory Regulation SPECS The book defines each area and elaborates on how these goals are addressed in different activity themes Each activity has a theme goal and strategies that address the SPECS The goal for the parents is to increase their understanding of their child and provide a safe and supportive setting where they can openly share with the clinical facilitator and fellow parents the stages they travel as parents of children on the Autism Spectrum Asperger's Disorder The journey involves stages of denial anger and frustration bargaining sadness advocacy and acceptance This journey does not travel a linear path but moves up and down in relationship to how their child is doing The stages come to life with direct quotes from the parents along with a story written by a parent who was not aware of how we were going to present this process in our first book Asperger's Disorder in Young Children 2004 Over time an increasing number of fathers are attending each session and that has provided a rich insight into the paths that couples travel The group parents provide each other with ongoing support years after they leave the group often sending us updates on the progress their child has made or their recent achievements as for example an Eagle Scout in the martial arts in the arts or in their transition to college The book contains the charts that we use in the group a guide to children's books we use in our program and a list of books for professionals and parents Lastly we provide a review of our pilot outcome study preliminary data and a set of outcome measures Nothing is more satisfying than watching a child who asked their parents and the staff at the start of the program who needs friends leave the program with a desire to maintain the friendships they made in the group and gradually expand their social world with a little nudge and lots of love from their parents
