Brain Connectivity Analysis: Investigating Brain Disorders Barry Horwitz, Silvina G. Horowitz, In the last few years advances in human structural and functional neuroimaging fMRI PET EEG MEG have resulted in an explosion of studies investigating the anatomical and functional connectivity between different regions of the brain More and more studies have employed resting and task related connectivity analyses to assess functional interactions and diffusion weighted tractography to study white matter organization Many of these studies have addressed normal human function but recently a number of investigators have turned their attention to examining brain disorders The study of brain disorders is a complex endeavor not only does it require understanding the normal brain and the regions involved in a particular function but also it needs a deeper understanding of brain networks and their dynamics This Research Topic will provide the scientific community with an overview of how to apply connectivity methods to study brain disease and with perspectives on what are the strength and limitations of each modality For this Research Topic we solicit both reviews and original research articles on the use of brain connectivity analysis with non human or human models to explore neurological psychiatric developmental and neurodegenerative disorders from a system perspective Connectivity studies that have focused on one or more of the following will be of particular interest 1 detection of abnormal functional structural connectivity 2 neural plasticity assessed by changes in connectivity in patients with brain disorders 3 assessment of therapy using connectivity measures 4 relation of connectivity changes to behavioral changes

Bullying Great Britain: Parliament: House of Commons: Education and Skills Committee, 2007-03-27 There has been an increasing awareness over the past few decades of bullying and the effect it has on the educational and social achievements of children and young people The Committee's report examines the progress that has been made to address this problem since the introduction of the Don't Suffer in Silence pack in 1994 the barriers that prevent schools from tackling bullying effectively issues of prejudice driven bullying including SEN related homophobic and faith based bullying and cyber bullying

The report finds that defining what bullying is and identifying instances of bullying is the first potential barrier to successfully tackling the problem Teachers and staff pupils and parents should all be aware of their school s definition of bullying and how this affects their own behaviour with the attitude and engagement of head teachers vital to tackling bullying The focus of anti bullying guidance should be tackling bullying behaviour and making it clear that such behaviour is not acceptable rather than attempting to change the behaviour of the victim The DfES should issue new guidance to local authorities and schools on when the use of exclusion is appropriate The lack of accurate reliable data on bullying is another barrier to more effective anti bullying work and the Government should commission a long term study of a number of schools looking at both general trends in bullying and also the effectiveness of different approaches in different circumstances The report also recommends that the Government needs to foster a culture where schools are encouraged to be open about incidents of bullying have effective ways of dealing with bullying when it occurs and provide support the victims of bullying rather than fearing reporting incidents of bullying will damage their reputation
