

Nature vs. Nurture

Nature vs Nurture is a debate between scientists about what makes people who they are. Some people believe that we are born with certain traits and abilities, while others believe that we are shaped by our environment. Both of these ideas have a lot of evidence behind them, but it's difficult to know for sure which one is right. In this article, we'll explore both sides of the debate and see what the science has to say about it.

One side of the debate is the idea that some people are born with certain traits and abilities, while others are not. This is the idea of "nature" and it has a lot of evidence behind it. For example, some people are born with a higher IQ than others, and some people are born with a higher level of athleticism than others. These traits are passed down from our parents and are not something that we can change. On the other hand, some people are born with a higher level of empathy than others, and some people are born with a higher level of creativity than others. These traits are also passed down from our parents, but they are not as easily measurable as IQ or athleticism.

On the other side of the debate is the idea that we are shaped by our environment. This is the idea of "nurture" and it also has a lot of evidence behind it. For example, some people grow up in a supportive and nurturing environment, while others grow up in a harsh and abusive environment. These environments can shape our personality and our abilities in a way that is not easily measurable. For example, a child who grows up in a supportive environment may be more likely to be successful in school and in life, while a child who grows up in a harsh environment may be more likely to have problems in school and in life. The environment can also shape our personality in a way that is not easily measurable. For example, a child who grows up in a supportive environment may be more likely to be empathetic and caring, while a child who grows up in a harsh environment may be more likely to be aggressive and self-centered.

So, what's the answer? Is it nature or nurture? The truth is, it's a little of both. We are born with certain traits and abilities, but our environment also shapes us in a way that is not easily measurable. The debate between nature and nurture is a complex one, and it's not always easy to know which one is right. But one thing is for sure: we are all shaped by both nature and nurture in some way.

Conclusion

The debate between nature and nurture is a complex one, and it's not always easy to know which one is right. But one thing is for sure: we are all shaped by both nature and nurture in some way.

 Linguistics grade 1 3 University of Bonn Institut für Anglistik Amerikanistik und Keltologie course Language Acquisition
 Psycholinguistik language English abstract This paper aims at exploring how the views on language acquisition have developed over time where they conflict each other and whether it is possible to position oneself on either side The nature vs nurture debate is an everlasting discussion not only in the area of linguistics but science in general This is what makes it particularly interesting because there is always new information to expect Furthermore it is an issue not limited to academic discourse only but one that appears in everyday conversation An interesting aspect of language acquisition more specifically the knowledge of language is the question if children arrive at such knowledge by the mere exposure to positive evidence i e the language of adults they are surrounded with or if negative evidence also has an impact i e children s knowledge of language is based on explicit or implicit feedback to whether an utterance was in some way incorrect The two terms will be defined and looked into in more detail in the second chapter In the following the correlation between the nature vs nurture debate and language acquisition will be explained first The respective chapter provides a brief insight into how the nativist approach developed mainly based on Chomsky s 1988 notion of Universal Grammar UG and the type of criticism it brought along It further explains the connection between the respective theories and the grammatical aspect of language acquisition In the last section the main problems of experience based language learning will be displayed and defined The third chapter starts with a section dedicated to where the particular view that humans need innate structures for a correct knowledge of language stems from It continues with a detailed look on the no negative evidence problem The non existence of negative evidence and which role it plays in terms of language acquisition will be explored from different standpoints by nativists as well as non nativists Inter-identities' in Life, Mind, and Society Arantza Etxeberria, Kepa Ruiz-Mirazo, Luisa Damiano, 2021-08-18 Picking up the Pieces Mustafa Chowdhury, 2015-07-07 Chowdhury describes the journeys to Canada of the first contingent of 15 war babies that were embraced by their adoptive parents when they reached their new homes in Canada in July 1972 breaking the racial boundaries and re defining what a family could be Products of one of the most outrageous crimes these babies were conceived by Bangladeshi women victims of sexual crimes committed by the Pakistani military personnel in Occupied Bangladesh Since it was a case of enforced pregnancy through penile penetration against the will of the victims the undesirable newborns were seen as disposable or throw away babies by both the birth mothers and the Bangladeshi society Through sharp analysis Chowdhury has illustrated with poignant vignettes an important fact of life that human beings desire and need close relationships Using archival records International Social Service International Planned Parenthood Federation Library and Archives Canada Department of External Affairs and Manpower
