DOI 10.1515/jso-2015-0041

Abstract: A précis of Michael Tomasello, A Natural History of Human Thinking (Harvard University Press, 2014).

Keywords: Thinking; Shared intentionality; Collective intentionality; Normativity; Evolution; Perspective.

In 1999, things were simple. In my 1999 book, I argued that only humans have culture, language, social institutions, and everything else because only humans understood others as intentional agents (Tomasello 1999). But then new data started rolling in suggesting that great apes also understood that others have goals (e.g. they reacted to what another was trying to do not what he actually did) and that others perceive things (e.g. they knew when a competitor saw food and when he did not). But of course they still did not have culture, language, and all the rest. Something was amiss.

In 2001 I attended a workshop here in Leipzig (hosted by Georg Meggle) on Margaret Gilbert on social facts. Reading her work, I decided to present a paper on “Can chimpanzees take a walk together”? The answer was of course that they cannot in the relevant sense, that is, they cannot make a joint commitment to take a walk together. And this provided a new way of looking at things. Previously I had thought that understanding others as intentional agents brought with it – somehow naturally and for free – the skills and motivations to share intentional states with one another in collaborating and communicating with them. The new ape data suggested that this was not the case: one can understand others as intentional agents for purposes of competing with them. So the answer must be that only humans both understand others as intentional agents and have the skills and motivations to share intentional states with them.

A Natural History of Human Thinking Michael Tomasello, 2014-02-17 Language or culture tool making or religion ever since Darwin thinkers have struggled to identify what differentiates human beings from other animals Michael Tomasello weaves his twenty years of comparative studies of humans and great apes into a compelling argument that cooperative social interaction is the key to our cognitive uniqueness

The Single-Minded Animal Preston Stovall, 2021-09-15 This book provides an account of discursive or reason governed cognition by synthesizing research in the philosophy of language the philosophy of mind and evolutionary anthropology Using the grasp of a natural language as a model for the autonomous or self governed rationality of discursive cognition the author uses a semantics for individual intentions shared intentions and normative attitudes as a framework for understanding what it is to be a rational animal This semantics interprets claims about shared intentions and claims about what people ought and may do as the expression of plans of action that involve taking the points of view of other people within a community This has important consequences for our understanding of both the natural basis and the social relevance of intentional and normative mental states In order to distinguish the strong and weak modal force which characterizes normativity but not shared intentionality the author argues that a notion of single minded practical cognition is necessary This account of single mindedness is then used to shed light on the autonomy or self government characteristic of discursive cognition as manifest in a linguistic community whose members are able to adopt the standpoints of others Drawing together research in philosophy and the related sciences the formal account of the semantic content of the claims we use to give expression to shared intentional and normative mental states integrates well with research in cognitive science evolutionary anthropology and social psychology concerning the ontogenetic and phylogenetic development of shared intentionality and norm psychology in human beings and other primates The Single Minded Animal will appeal to researchers and advanced students working on shared intentionality normativity rationality cognitive science social and developmental psychology and evolutionary anthropology

The Natural History of the Mind Gordon Rattray Taylor, 1981 Exploding Stars, Dead Dinosaurs, and Zombies Andrew Root, 2017-12-05 Many things threaten the faith of youth today but none more than science The commitments of science and Christianity seem to be at odds science makes truth claims based on experiments and proofs while religion asks for belief and trust But Andrew Root demonstrates that in fact the two are not incompatible Root a renowned expert on adolescent spirituality shows how science overstates its claims on truth while faith often understates its own claims Both faith and science frame the experience and reality of teenagers and both have something valuable to offer as adolescents develop Drawing on a fictional account of a youth pastor and the various students he encounters Root paints a compelling picture of how faith can flourish even in our scientific age
