- 11. Proposed Reforms and Recommendations
 - (a) Policy-making: The government, civil service, commissioners, public representatives, and regulators should be held more accountable and the self-interests of government bodies reduced (and those reduced by the government should be held more accountable). The public sector should be given the greatest autonomy to manage their own processes.
 - (b) Transparency: Transparency and accountability by the public sector should be strengthened by mechanisms, measures, and mechanisms.
- 12. Suggestions
 - (a) Government bodies, including agencies ("the best service," the most efficient business units) and government bodies, should be restructured.
 - (b) State-owned enterprises (of which a significant part continue operating semi-autonomously) should be converted into accountable mechanisms ("state enterprises," state-owned enterprises, business units, franchises and franchises, and the government and groups).
- 13. Revised Recommendations
 - (a) A revised mechanism comprising a committee of four commissioners and commissioners.
 - (b) Three commissioners and one chairman (selected by a revised system) should be given executive authority (business, state-owned enterprises, state enterprises, business units, franchises and franchises, and the government and groups) and a revised mechanism comprising a committee of four commissioners and commissioners.
- 14. Conclusion
 - (a) The present set of recommendations for the performance and regulation should be finalised and implemented.
 - (b) Government bodies, business units, enterprises, and commissioners should be held more accountable, while public sector mechanisms for public sector transparency and accountability should be strengthened.
- 15. Recommendations to Government Ministers
 - (a) In an environment of accountability, three commissioners should have greater legal protection, reduced term limits, and greater public support. Commissioners should be required to undergo regular mandatory training. Commissioners should receive and take regular feedback on performance, which should be made public.
 - (b) State-owned enterprises, business units, franchises and franchises should be held more accountable by making mechanisms available to regulate their processes. The regulators should receive regular feedback on performance, which should be made public.
