"Catch-22"

Joseph Heller

The three types of themes that can be found in a story are major and minor. A major theme is an idea that is an author's message in the story, making it the main theme of the story. A minor theme is an idea that shows up in a story briefly, giving way to one other minor theme.

The most common is theme of a story with its subject. The subject is the topic that acts as a foundation in a story, while is the one in an opinion expressed on the subject. For example, a writer may choose a subject of freedom for their story, and the theme may be the personal opinion that it's better to be in the end than the beginning.

Themes present themselves in a story through several ways. A writer may express a theme through the change of their main character about the subject of the story over time or the other. Themes can also be presented through the sights and sounds of different characters. Most importantly, the experiences and the main character throughout a story often act as a theme. Finally, the actions and events taking place in a narrative are important to the remaining the theme.
