Martin-Rubió,2018-09-30 English as a Lingua Franca ELF research has become central in current debates in linguistics and is commonly referred to in conferences dealing with other sub fields of sociolinguistics This volume collects ten papers that testify to the great scope of ELF research currently being carried out through the analysis of different kinds of data in a variety of contexts and domains The three chapters in the first part of the volume tackle computer mediated communication a medium that currently accounts for a great proportion of human communication The four contributions in the second section differ with regards to the domains under investigation and all touch upon social issues that have an impact on how language is used from Vietnamese university students negotiating their identities in the UK to a Pakistani migrant making efforts to be understood by Italian officials Finally the three papers in the final part are an example of the many ELF oriented pedagogical initiatives that have emerged in recent years across educational levels and all over the world The introduction to the volume also situates ELF research in its current transition to a third phase in which more attention will be paid to the multilingual nature of ELF users The proposal put forward in the introductory chapter holds that ELF has two well established fronts where more quality work will surely be carried out and that ELF could benefit from establishing connections to other approaches to multilingualism and languaging but without forgetting what the E in the acronym stands for This collection of papers will be of interest to teachers and language practitioners who are curious about the ELF paradigm researchers in ELF and in sociolinguistics and applied linguistics in general internet linguists and computer mediated communication experts educational policymakers and undergraduate and postgraduate students taking courses in areas such as applied linguistics English studies multilingualism and plurilingualism and intercultural communication amongst other fields

Advances on P2P, Parallel, Grid, Cloud and Internet Computing Fatos Xhafa, Santi Caballé, Leonard Barolli, 2017-11-02

This book presents the latest innovative research findings on P2P Parallel Grid Cloud and Internet Computing. It gathers the Proceedings of the 12th International Conference on P2P Parallel Grid Cloud and Internet Computing held on November 8-10 2017 in Barcelona, Spain. These computing technologies have rapidly established themselves as breakthrough paradigms for solving complex problems by enabling the aggregation and sharing of an increasing variety of distributed computational resources at large scale. Grid Computing originated as a paradigm for high performance computing, offering an alternative to expensive supercomputers through different forms of large scale distributed computing, while P2P Computing emerged as a new paradigm after client server and web based computing and has shown to be useful in the development of social networking, B2B Business to Business, B2C Business to Consumer, B2G Business to Government, B2E Business to Employee, and so on. Cloud Computing has been defined as a computing paradigm where the boundaries of computing are determined by economic rationale rather than technical limits. Cloud computing has quickly been adopted in a broad range of application domains and provides utility computing at large scale. Lastly, Internet Computing is the basis of any large scale distributed computing paradigm; it has very rapidly developed into a flourishing field with an enormous impact on today's information societies, serving as a universal platform comprising a large variety of computing forms such as Grid, P2P, Cloud and Mobile computing. The aim of the book Advances on P2P, Parallel, Grid, Cloud and Internet Computing is to provide the latest findings, methods and development techniques from both theoretical and practical perspectives and to reveal synergies between these large scale computing paradigms.
