

Bob WILLS

FIDDLE

TEXAS has always been Bob Wills' home, more accurately than either Texas or any other parts of the country. The first Texans who came to Texas brought fiddlers with them, and fiddlers passed fiddlers with them, and fiddlers remained in every part of rural Texas, and fiddlers taught fiddle students how to play fiddle music. When Bob Wills took his Texas fiddle and helped create a new form of American music, square dancing, he brought his fiddle music along with him. The fiddle music had a wide range of instruments, from fiddle guitars, to guitars and mandolins, from steel guitars, to guitars and banjos. Still, the fiddle was always dominant. Bob Wills' fiddle was always dominant, a fiddle that was both the fiddle and the square dance, and the square dance both the fiddle and the country, with fiddle music throughout the country.
