Body And Mind Are One A Training In Mindfulness:

Self-Organization in the Nervous System Yan M. Yufik, Biswa Sengupta, Karl Friston, 2017-11-30 This special issue reviews state of the art approaches to the biophysical roots of cognition. These approaches appeal to the notion that cognitive capacities serve to optimize responses to changing external conditions. Crucially, this optimisation rests on the ability to predict changes in the environment, thus allowing organisms to respond preemptively to changes before their onset. The biophysical mechanisms that underwrite these cognitive capacities remain largely unknown, although a number of hypotheses has been advanced in systems neuroscience, biophysics and other disciplines. These hypotheses converge on the intersection of thermodynamic and information theoretic formulations of self organization in the brain. The latter perspective emerged when Shannon's theory of message transmission in communication systems was used to characterise message passing between neurons. In its subsequent incarnations, the information theory approach has been integrated into computational neuroscience and the Bayesian brain framework. The thermodynamic formulation rests on a view of the brain as an aggregation of stochastic microprocessors, neurons, with subsequent appeal to the constructs of statistical mechanics and thermodynamics. In particular, the use of ensemble dynamics to elucidate the relationship between micro scale parameters and those of the macro scale aggregation of the brain. In general, the thermodynamic approach treats the brain as a dissipative system and seeks to represent the development and functioning of cognitive mechanisms as collective capacities that emerge in the course of self organization. Its explicanda include energy efficiency enabling progressively more complex cognitive operations such as long term prediction and anticipatory planning. A cardinal example of the Bayesian brain approach is the free energy principle that explains self organizing dynamics in the brain in terms of its predictive capabilities and selective sampling of sensory inputs that optimise variational free energy as a proxy for Bayesian model evidence. An example of thermodynamically grounded proposals in this issue associates self organization with phase transitions in neuronal state spaces, resulting in the formation of bounded neuronal assemblies, neuronal packets. This special issue seeks a discourse between thermodynamic and informational formulations of the self organising and self evidencing brain. For example, could minimization of thermodynamic free energy during the formation of neuronal packets underlie minimization of variational free energy.

Neuroimaging and Neuropsychology of Meditation States Barbara Tomasino, Franco Fabbro, 2017 Neurophysiological and psychological modifications induced by meditation practice have been consistently addressed by neuroscience. Training meditation practice induced plasticity (Barinaga 2003, Knight 2004) and as a consequence several benefit for mental and physical health (Davidson, McEwen 2012) and cognitive performance. One goal of meditation is to achieve the light of consciousness, observing with equanimity the right distance clouds of the mind, wandering. This Frontiers Research Topic brings together studies from groups of authors whose research focus on neuropsychological systems involved in meditation, demonstrating how meditation activates and can modify brain areas, cognitive mechanisms and well being.

Brain-Mind-Body Practice and Health Yi-Yuan Tang, 2018-01-09 It is acknowledged that practice could induce rapid change or reorganization of the brain's cellular or neural networks as well as behaviors. Notably, practice relevant to mental or physical approach attracted great attention in this decade. It highlights profound significance both for human evolution and individual development. Specifically, acquiring fine motor skills is a crucial premise for human being to evolve to modern human by using tools in one side. In the other side, numerous evidences indicated that motor learning involved in limb and trunks promotes the development of individual brain in anatomy and functions. Hence, motor learning is also tightly associated with developmental plasticity. These studies on brain mind body practice illuminate a promising way in promoting human brain health. This editorial covers wide range of brain mind body practice forms to summarize recent new findings and development from behavioral, physiological, neurobiological and psychological science approaches. In this research topic, we addressed recent findings from theoretical as well as experimental perspective including contributions under the following three headings: 1. intervention studies to investigate the positive effect of brain mind body practice on cognition and relevant brain mechanism. The intervention pattern consisted of short term practice ranging from few hours to several weeks. 2. cross sectional studies using expert novice paradigm to explore the behavioral and neural system change induced by extensive brain mind body practice. 3. the mediators influence the relationship between practice and health outcomes and 4. new viewpoints on brain mind body practice from theoretical perspectives. Here we briefly highlight these articles aiming to provide a deep understanding for the association between practice, plasticity and health for readers. Additionally, it offers new insights for developing possible practice interventions for clinical treatment of neurological dysfunction or disorders.

Likewise, the proportion of chronic diseases is growing. This includes cardiovascular diseases, chronic pain, inflammatory bowel diseases and cancer. Unfavorable lifestyle factors such as accumulative stress, lack of exercise and poor nutrition compounded by a persistent imbalance between exertion and recovery lead to the manifestation and chronification of disease. A fundamental awareness of the connection between our mind, emotions, lifestyle and health has grown.
