

U.S. FEDERAL GOVERNMENT

THE CONSTITUTION

- A formal document is a set of principles/agreements which a nation is politically committed
- There are 2 US Basic laws: constitutions. The Articles of Confederation (1777) and the Federal Constitution (1787) and the Federal Constitution (1789).
- The Federal Constitution outlined the structure of the U.S. Federal Government. It gave more power than the Articles of Confederation and the Federal Constitution, but it removed many powers from the states.
- It was ratified by the states for their ratifications in 1789.
- It was ratified by the states (1787 and 1789).
- It took effect (the date of the law) since March 4th, 1789.

PRINCIPLES

- Federal powers in the system reflect a federal/m national government shares power with smaller state governments.
- The division of powers is detailed in the Constitution.
- Federal and state governments exercise power over individuals.

THE SENATE

- Prior to the adoption of the 12th Amendment to the Constitution in 1803, senators were appointed by state legislatures, since then, they have been elected by the people.
- Senators cannot be suspended, removed, or impeached for their service in their state, but they can be removed by the people.
- Senators cannot be suspended, removed, or impeached for their service in their state, but they can be removed by the people.

- There are 100 senators, from each state. The 50 senators from each state are just as powerful as large states.
- As in Congress, there are Majority and Minority leaders.
- In the event of a tied vote in the Senate, the Vice-President (who also serves as President of the Senate) casts the deciding vote to break a tie.

THE LEGISLATURE

- Members of the House of Representatives are elected by the people directly.
- Senators are appointed by their state governments.
- There are 435 seats in the House, the party that holds a majority of seats (70%) controls the House.

- All the legislation of each Congress (usually following biannual elections, in November), starts first in the House of Representatives.
- The Majority Leader leads the Democratic/Republican side of the House, and controls the legislative agenda.

PRIMARILY

- It primarily is held before a general election to nominate party candidates.
- It includes third-party politicians, most, and the party members who are most sympathetic to the party's national committee members (statewide candidates).
- Presidential candidates try to secure support from delegations (delegation is selected before a party convention).
- Delegates are chosen by a process of voting at state conventions, delegations, delegations are chosen at a series of meetings, delegations of which are meeting at state conventions.

THE JUDICIARY

- The Supreme Court, traditionally composed of nine justices, is the highest authority of the Constitution. "The judicial power of the United States shall be vested in one Supreme Court, and in such inferior Courts as the Congress may from time to time ordain and establish."
- All Justices are appointed and have no term limits.
- Although the Supreme Court does not have a legislative office in the nation, various appointed justices can represent the branch individually.
- The Supreme Court rules a nomination (such as Robert Bork) as highly influential to bring in the recognition the importance of balance.

JUDICIAL REVIEW

- "The power vested in the Supreme Court of judicial review enables it to declare an unconstitutional law or executive/legislative action unconstitutional." - Justice O'Connor
- It is the power of the Supreme Court to declare an act of Congress or a Presidential act unconstitutional.
- First applied in Marbury vs. Madison (1803).
- Used sparingly until the 1940s when it was used against the New Deal; it has been used more commonly since then.

CHECKS & BALANCES

- "The powers of government should be so divided and balanced among several bodies of magistrates, as that no one could despise their legal limits, without being effectually checked and restrained by the others." - Charles de Montesquieu
- The Constitution is a system of checks and balances that prevents one branch of government from abusing ultimate power.
- In effect, the President has veto legislation from Congress.
- It prevents the Congress to nominate a Presidential term, their Presidential appointments, and reduces its right to confirm Supreme Court Justices.
- It gives the Supreme Court the authority to declare acts of Congress or the President as unconstitutional.

SEPARATION OF POWERS

- "There can be no liberty where the legislative and executive powers are united in the same person, or if the power of judging be not separated from the legislative and executive powers." - George Washington

LEGISLATIVE & PRESIDENTIAL POWERS

Legislative	• Congress (House of Representatives and the Senate) has the primary legislative power.
Executive	• Congress (Senate or Representatives) and the President
Judicial	• The federal court system.

Principle: The three branches of government are based on the principle of separation of powers. There is also a federal bureaucracy that implements policies that are enacted by the legislature and executive.
