

Study Guide for Ben Hur

As a film passes so rapidly, it is wise to do a pre-study and provide students with guides and questions before the actual viewing. As Ben Hur is so long, this study unit provides for approximately forty-five minutes of viewing on five consecutive days. Questions for each session can be given the students on the preceding day, so that they may have some guide as to what to look for in any given session. If the class periods are long enough to allow it, some class discussion at the end of each unit is profitable. Any questions to be answered on paper should probably be done at the end of each session; at least before the next. Special credit could be given for the most correct answers or for extra observations not requested.

Study notes for pre-viewing preparation

A. Cultures

Roman

Three cultures of the ancient world are presented, and to a certain extent stereotyped, in this film. The Romans, the Jews, and the Arabs are all presented in various forms and ways. The might of Rome is clear in this film, as is the arrogance of some Romans. Students should note, however, that both Tiberius Caesar and Quintus Arrius are men whose power, far greater than Messala's, does not seem to have turned them into monsters as Messala's power has. In his early meetings with Judah Messala seems to regard Rome merely as a staircase on which he can rise. Arrius makes a better Roman character study. He has the toughness, the "death before dishonor" code, the respect for courage and strength, and the love for it.

Judah which he can only express by setting him free, which make a great human and a great Roman. The emphasis which Romans placed on having a son to carry on one's name and to honor family graves makes his sacrifice to Judah's wishes all the more potent. Pontius Pilate, the other prominent Roman in the film, is a friend of Arrius who does not wish to harm Judah. However, he intends to maintain peace in Judea regardless of who may suffer for it.

Cultural signs to watch for: Roman dress and armor; sailing vessels; marching formations and musical instruments; triumphal parade.

Arabian

The culture of the Arabian desert peoples is represented by Shiek Ilderim, the trader with the magnificent horses, and by Balthazar the Wise Man who comes back looking for the mature Christ. Ilderim with his impish sense of humor, his interesting defense of polygamy, his knowledge and love of horses, and his subtlety in dealing with the Romans and with Judah shows the wisdom and cleverness of his people. His reference to the common descent of Jews and Arabs from Abraham throws still more light on this prince of the desert. Balthazar, who is traditionally considered a Chaldean astronomer, comes from desert people not grandchildren but cousins of Abraham--the ancient and learned Sumerian-Babylonian races. His gentleness and truth-seeking show another facet of the desert peoples.

Cultural signs to watch for: Arab dress; horses and their names; polygamy; subtle reasoning.
