Aging In Black America:

Aging in Black America James S. Jackson, Linda M. Chatters, Robert Taylor, 1993 This book provides a systematic overview of the status and life situations of elderly black Americans Based on an empirical national survey the contributors examine the major substantive issues related to psychological and social dimensions of ageing from a perspective that addresses the population's special circumstances and strengths Sections are devoted to community friends and family church and religion health social functioning and well being group identity and political participation and retirement and work Aging in Black Communities National Urban League, 1978 The Black Elderly Marguerite M. Coke, James A. Twaite, 1995 In The Black Elderly Satisfaction and Quality of Later Life authors Marguerite Coke and James Twaite present the results of an empirical study of factors that influence the well being of older black Americans Like all older individuals in industrial nations elderly blacks are confronted with negative attitudes toward old people But in spite of their minority status in society with its economic and social disadvantages elderly blacks have effective coping strategies for dealing with growing old It is the success of these coping strategies that the authors reveal to readers and upon which they build recommendations to encourage healthy aging in the black community Through comprehensive research into the subject the authors provide readers with a theoretical framework which identifies the variables that are most closely associated with subjective well being among older Blacks An empirical test of the model is described and the questionnaire is included Professionals and scholars in social work gerontology African American studies and anthropology will find The Black Elderly a positive approach to supporting the elderly black community Readers with interests in cross cultural aspects of counseling and gerontology will find much enlightenment in this book with its research and insight on history overviews West African culture and the role of history in the development of the black American family church analyzes the function and importance of this institution on the black community family explores the importance of family and how it affects life satisfaction health determines how perceived health status affects individuals feelings of life satisfaction The authors findings on the strong and diverse support systems of this group assist professionals students and policymakers in better understanding how to continue to effect healthy aging for black Americans The Black Elderly is of particular interest to social workers students in social work programs and professionals who deal with aging persons or the black community and can benefit from historical background knowledge of blacks in this country and how societal institutions affect the well being of this group Aging in America Deborah Carr, 2023-02-14 Introduction aging in America Historical and contemporary perspectives on aging Who are older adults today a contemporary snapshot Family and social relationships Health and well being Aging policy issues domestic and international perspectives Conclusion Black Women in America Kim Marie Vaz, 1994-11-02 Nominated for the 1995 Distinguished Publication Award of the Association for Women in Psychology A provocative insightful volume Black Women in America offers an interdisciplinary study of black women's historic activism representation in literature and popular media self constructed images and current psychosocial challenges This new work by outstanding scholars in the field of race and gender studies explores the ways in which black women have constantly reconstructed and transformed alien definitions of black womanhood Black women have an image of themselves that differs from those others impose Collectively the contributors to this anthology demonstrate that such socially constructed images hide the complexities and ambiguities the challenges and the joys experienced in the real lives of black women Multifaceted in its approach Black Women in America is certain to stimulate debate stretch minds and spark future research Black Women in America is a welcome resource for scholars and students in African American or Ethnic Studies Women s Studies Sociology and Psychology The volume can be helpful in stimulating questions and discussion for students in African American studies Choice Black Women in America combines social history with contemporary analysis in one of the most thoughtful of scholarly compendia I have ever seen It will be useful to scholars who teach history sociology African American studies and women s studies but also to any American interested in a deeper and broader understanding of America s past present and future Sarah Susannah Willie Colby College Maine At a time when several anthologies of essays by and about black women are hitting the shelves Kim Marie Vaz s volume boasts an unusual and inventive mix of topics It treats a range of historical eras and geographical locations The apt emphasis on resistance rather than victimization is apparent throughout the essays I read it provides an excellent focal point In all Vaz s editorial contribution is admirable She has collected an impressively wide ranging group of essays on the history sociology and culture of black women Interdisciplinary in its approach and sound in its scholarship the volume will be welcomed by scholars and students in African American studies and women s studies in particular but also history sociology and political science Cheryl Ann Wall Rutgers University Black America in the 1980s John Reid,1982 The Challenging Health Care Issues Affecting Older African Americans United States. who appreciate perspective shaping works like The Warmth of Other Suns by Isabel Wilkerson or The New Jim Crow by Michelle Alexander. Aging While Black offers a fresh perspective on one of today's most critical issues. The Construction of Aging and Health in Older African American Women Ilana Reisz, 2006. Persistence of racial and ethnic health disparities and governmental policies based on outdated ideas of aging call for inclusive approaches to the study of elder African Americans. The lived experiences of aging among urban poor African American women who comprise a vulnerable population are not well known as most studies focus on mainstream populations. Gerontological studies have tended to employ methods that collapse contextual information for ease of analysis thus failing to capture nuanced information critically relevant to health of marginalized groups. Few researchers have been successful highlighting the importance of local knowledge, resilience and resources for health by using participatory methods with older Black women. This study utilizes participatory principles to gather discursive data from nine older African American women engaged in three generational cohorts: those born around World War II, women born after the great depression and those born before the great depression. Videotaped and transcribed conversations of cohorts were analyzed in search of contextual factors that influence their experience of aging and health. As women responded to general themes that provoked their talk about their lives, they helped answer the study's questions: How do older African American women make sense of their aging experience? What are some of the important social and cultural influences that shape the construction of aging and health by these women? Are generational discourse groups an effective tool for exploring changes in the experiences of aging? A key finding demonstrated rich heterogeneity of experiences with strong generational influences on the construction of aging and health. The participants' moral orders comprised of traditional values of family reinforced by personal experiences and the church have guided their lives through oppression and stress but appear to be failing younger women who have greater exposure to new environmental pressures. Limited time and the size of the study were weaknesses, although the women's interest in the study and their participation were gratifying. The participants served to highlight the importance of recognizing generational and other contextual factors in formation of ideas of aging and likelihood of additional challenges to the experience of old age among older poorer African Americans.
