

Sample Knowledge Test (KT) question – single best answer question from five options

Jacob, aged 4 years, presents with his mother who is now concerned that over the last 2 days he has suddenly complained of soreness in his right knee and is limping when he walks. He is normally very active and energetic, but now doesn't want to play outdoors with his friends.

He has had a temperature but his mother thinks he may have an upper respiratory tract infection. There is no history of any injury or trauma to the knee.

On examination, his temperature is 38.5°C Celsius, there is a slight joint effusion around the right knee, it is warm to touch and it is painful when you move it.

What is the MOST appropriate provisional diagnosis?

- A. Fracture
- B. Meniscal tear
- C. Osteomyelitis
- D. Septic arthritis
- E. Transient synovitis

Correct answer

- D. Septic Arthritis

Notes and explanation

This question is important because septic arthritis in children is an orthopaedic emergency and requires prompt diagnosis and treatment.

Any child presenting with symptoms and signs consistent with septic arthritis should be urgently referred to the emergency department (ED) of a hospital with an orthopaedic service. In rural and remote settings urgent telephone advice should be obtained from the nearest orthopaedic service.

- A. Fracture is unlikely as there is no history of injury or trauma to the knee, and would not cause a fever.
- B. Meniscal tear is unlikely as there is no history of injury or trauma to the knee and it would not cause a fever.

C. Osteomyelitis may mimic septic arthritis in its presentation, however given the rapid onset of symptoms with initial joint involvement, a diagnosis of septic arthritis is more likely.

- D. Septic Arthritis is the most likely diagnosis.
- E. Transient synovitis is less likely given the presence of fever. Although transient synovitis is more common than septic arthritis, given the serious nature of the latter condition, any child presenting with joint irritability and fever should be considered to have septic arthritis until proven otherwise.
