Designing Field Studies for Biodiversity Conservation Peter Feinsinger,2001-07-01 Anyone working in biodiversity conservation or field ecology should understand and utilize the common sense process of scientific inquiry observing surroundings framing questions answering those questions through well designed studies and in many cases applying results to decision making Yet the interdisciplinary nature of conservation means that many workers are not well versed in the methods of science and may misunderstand or mistrust this indispensable tool Designing Field Studies for Biodiversity Conservation addresses that problem by offering a comprehensible practical guide to using scientific inquiry in conservation work In an engaging and accessible style award winning tropical ecologist and teacher Peter Feinsinger melds concepts methods and intellectual tools into a unique approach to answering environmental questions through field studies Focusing on the fundamentals of common sense independent thinking and natural history he considers framing the question and designing the study interpreting and applying results through judicious use of statistical inference taking into account the natural history of plants animals and landscapes monitoring and assessing progress through approaches such as bioindicator species or species diversity measures helping other interested parties park guards local communities school teachers use scientific inquiry in addressing their own concerns Detailed appendixes explain technical issues while numerous sidebars and illustrations provide important background and thought provoking exercises Throughout the author challenges the reader to integrate conceptual thinking with on the ground practice in order to make conservation truly effective Feinsinger concentrates on examples from Latin America but stresses that the approach applies to local conservation concerns or field biology questions in any landscape Designing Field Studies for Biodiversity Conservation is an essential handbook for staff and researchers working with conservation institutions or projects worldwide as well as for students and professionals in field ecology wildlife biology and related areas    Resources in Education ,1998-05    Environmental Science Michael L. developing world will require an educated constituency in both the developing and developed world Habitat loss is particularly acute in developing countries which is of special concern because it tends to be these locations where the greatest species diversity and richest centres of endemism are to be found Sadly developing world conservation scientists have found it difficult to access an authoritative textbook which is particularly ironic since it is these countries where the potential benefits of knowledge application are greatest There is now an urgent need to educate the next generation of scientists in developing countries so that they are in a better position to protect their natural resources Subject Guide to Children's Books in Print 1997 Bowker Editorial Staff, R R Bowker Publishing, 1996-09 Key Questions in Wildlife & Nature Conservation Law Paul A.
