

CHAPTER 10: ACCOUNTING FOR GOVERNMENTAL OPERATING ACTIVITIES – TRANSLATING TRANSACTIONS AND FINANCIAL STATEMENTS

Accounting Overview

10.1 Further the United States financial reporting model, governmental activities are reported as a long series of reports as the government will first bring the economic transaction accounting basis and the current basis of accounting together to determine accounting. This means that both current and historical events and activities are reported on the statement of net assets. Historical and current, aggregated on the current basis, are reported on the statement of activities. Currently, the General Fund reports on a budgetary basis perspective using the various financial statement components and the modified accrual basis of accounting. Therefore, the General Fund reports only current assets and liabilities. Revenues and expenditures and other financing sources and uses, aggregated on the modified accrual basis, are reported on the statement of activities, expenditures, and changes in fund balances.

Examples of transactions for events that are recorded only in the General Fund general journal include: budgetary control and non-exchange transactions. Examples of transactions that are recorded only in the governmental activities general journal include: depreciation expense and general capital assets and accrual of interest on long-term debt (as discussed in Chapter 13). Illustration of goods and services, salaries and wages, and other financial items are examples of transactions that are recorded in both the General Fund general journal and the governmental activities journal.

10.2 The primary difference is that the government-wide statement of net assets focuses on long-term assets, liabilities and contingencies, uses the accrual basis of accounting. However, the General Fund focuses on current financial resources and depicts the modified accrual basis of accounting. That that means, current assets, including cash, liabilities are reported on the government-wide statement of net assets, that are reported on expenditures and other financing sources on the General Fund financial statement.

Another difference is that the statement of net assets aggregates all governmental activities: the General Fund, special districts, capital projects, debt service, pensioned funds, and some internal service funds and reports change in net assets, whereas the balance sheet the governmental funds presents a balance for the General Fund, each major fund, and an column for all other non-major funds. A further difference is that the statement of net assets can be prepared either on the net position basis (current assets, liabilities, equity) or position for the modified basis (current assets of the General Fund, current equity, liabilities plus fund equity).

10.3 The use of non-exchange transactions illustrates a portion of the accounting budgetary appropriation where a government will bring budgetary control for activities to support their existing departmental activities and financial department personnel that a portion of the authorization is no longer available. However for non-exchange, it is always possible that
