These are the steps you can take to prevent your child from becoming a victim of child abuse:

- Get to know your child's teacher. Ask questions about the teacher's background, training, and experience. Make sure the teacher is certified and has a good reputation.
- Establish a good relationship with your child's teacher. This will help you to detect any changes in your child's behavior or attitude.
- Stay involved in your child's education. Attend parent-teacher conferences, volunteer at school, and stay in touch with your child's teacher throughout the year.
- Be aware of your child's behavior. If your child exhibits any unusual behavior, such as withdrawal, aggression, or changes in mood, it may be a sign of abuse.
- Teach your child about child abuse. Help your child understand what child abuse is, and how to prevent it.
- Establish a support network. If you suspect your child is being abused, seek help from a trusted friend, family member, or professional.
- Report any suspected abuse to the proper authorities. If you suspect your child is being abused, report it to the proper authorities, such as the police or child protective services.
