Beyond Rust Metropolitan Pittsburgh Industrial:

Beyond Rust Allen Dieterich-Ward,2015-10-21 Beyond Rust chronicles the rise fall and rebirth of metropolitan Pittsburgh an industrial region that once formed the heart of the world s steel production and is now touted as a model for reviving other hard hit cities of the Rust Belt Writing in clear and engaging prose historian and area native Allen Dieterich Ward provides a new model for a truly metropolitan history that integrates the urban core with its regional hinterland of satellite cities white collar suburbs mill towns and rural mining areas Pittsburgh reached its industrial heyday between 1880 and 1920 as vertically integrated industrial corporations forged a regional community in the mountainous Upper Ohio River Valley Over subsequent decades metropolitan population growth slowed as mining and manufacturing employment declined Faced with economic and environmental disaster in the 1930s Pittsburgh s business elite and political leaders developed an ambitious program of pollution control and infrastructure development The public private partnership behind the Pittsburgh Renaissance as advocates called it pursued nothing less than the selective erasure of the existing social and physical environment in favor of a modernist functionally divided landscape a goal that was widely copied by other aging cities and one that has important ramifications for the broader national story Ultimately the Renaissance vision of downtown skyscrapers sleek suburban research campuses and bucolic regional parks resulted in an uneven transformation that tore the urban fabric while leaving deindustrializing river valleys and impoverished coal towns isolated from areas of postwar growth Beyond Rust is among the first books of its kind to continue past the collapse of American manufacturing in the 1980s by exploring the diverse ways residents of an iconic industrial region sought places for themselves within a new economic order

Chicago's Industrial Decline Robert Lewis,2020-12-15 In Chicago s Industrial Decline Robert Lewis charts the city s decline since the 1920s and describes the early development of Chicago s famed and reviled growth machine Beginning in the 1940s and led by local politicians downtown business interest financial institutions and real estate groups place dependent organizations in Chicago implemented several industrial renewal initiatives with the dual purpose of stopping factory closings and attracting new firms in order to turn blighted property into modern industrial sites At the same time a more powerful coalition sought to adapt the urban fabric to appeal to middle class consumption and residential living As Lewis shows the two aims were never well integrated and the result was on going disinvestment and the inexorable decline of Chicago s industrial space By the 1950s Lewis argues it was evident that the early incarnation of the growth machine had failed to maintain Chicago s economic center in industry Although larger economic and social forces specifically competition for business and for residential development from the suburbs in the Chicagoland region and across the whole United States played a role in the city s industrial decline Lewis stresses the deep incoherence of post WWII economic policy and urban planning that hoped to square the circle by supporting both heavy industry and middle to upper class amenities in downtown Chicago Postindustrial DIY Daniel Campo,2024-02-13 Chronicles grassroots efforts to recover rebuild and enjoy architecturally iconic but economically obsolete places in the American Rust Belt. A pioneering Detroit automobile factory, a legendary iron mill at the edge of Pittsburgh, a campus of concrete grain elevators in Buffalo. Two monumental train stations, one in Buffalo, the other in Detroit. These once noble sites have since fallen from their towering grace. As local elected leaders did everything they could to destroy what was left of these places, citizens saw beauty and utility in these industrial ruins and felt compelled to act. Postindustrial DIY tells their stories. The culmination of more than a dozen years of on-the-ground investigation, ethnography, and historical analysis, author and urbanist Daniel Campo immerses the reader in this postindustrial landscape, weaving the perspectives of dozens of DIY protagonists as well as architects, planners, and preservationists. Working without capital, expertise, and sometimes permission in a milieu dominated by powerful political and economic interests, these do-it-yourself actors are driven by passion and a sense of civic duty rather than by profit or political expediency. They have craftily remade these sites into collective preservation projects and democratic grounds for arts and culture, environmental engagement, regional celebrations, itinerant play, and, in the moment, constructions. Their projects are generating excitement about the prospect of Rust Belt life even as they often remain invisible to the uninformed passerby and fall short of professional preservation or environmental reclamation standards. Demonstrating that there is no such thing as a site that is too far gone to save or reuse, Postindustrial DIY is rich with case studies that demonstrate how great architecture is not simply for the elites or the wealthy. The citizen preservationists and urbanists described in this book offer looser, more playful, and often more publicly satisfying alternatives to the development practices that have transformed iconic sites into expensive real estate or a clean slate for the next profitable endeavor. Transcending the disciplinary boundaries of architecture, historic preservation, city planning, and landscape architecture, Postindustrial DIY suggests new ways to engage, adapt, and preserve architecturally compelling sites and bottom-up strategies for Rust Belt revival.

Remaking the Rust Belt

Tracy Neumann, 2016-05-26
Cities in the North Atlantic coal and steel belt embodied industrial power in the early twentieth century but by the 1970s their economic and political might had been significantly diminished by newly industrializing regions in the Global South. This was not simply a North American phenomenon: the precipitous decline of mature steel centers like Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, and Hamilton, Ontario, was a bellwether for similar cities around the world. Contemporary narratives of the decline of basic industry on both sides of the Atlantic make the postindustrial transformation of old manufacturing centers seem inevitable, the product of natural business cycles and neutral market forces. In Remaking the Rust Belt, Tracy Neumann tells a different story, one in which local political and business elites, drawing on a limited set of internationally circulating redevelopment models, pursued postindustrial urban visions. They hired the same consulting firms, shared ideas about urban revitalization on study tours at conferences, and in the pages of professional journals, and began to plan cities oriented around services rather than manufacturing, all well in advance of the economic malaise of the 1970s. While postindustrialism remade cities, it came with high costs. In following this strategy, public officials sacrificed the well-being of large portions of their populations Remaking the Rust Belt recounts how local leaders throughout the Rust Belt created the jobs services leisure activities and cultural institutions that they believed would attract younger educated middle class professionals In the process they abandoned social democratic goals and widened and deepened economic inequality among urban residents Industrial Heritage and Regional Identities Christian Wicke, Stefan Berger, Jana Golombek, 2018-04-09

Heritage is not what we see in front of us it is what we make of it in our heads Heritage sites have been connected to a range of identitarian projects both spatial and non spatial One of the most common links with heritage has been national identity This book stresses that heritage has developed powerful links to regional and local identities Contributors deal explicitly with regions of heavy industry in different parts of the world exploring non spatial forms of identity including class religious ethnic racial gender and cultural identities In many heritage sites non spatial forms of identity are interlinked with spatial ones Civil society action has been important in representations of regional identities and industrial heritage campaigns Region branding seems to determine the ultimate success of industrial heritage a process that is closely connected to the marketing of regions to provide a viable economic future and attract tourism to the region

Selected case studies on coal and steel producing regions in this book provide the first global survey of how regions of heavy industry deal with their industrial heritage and what it means for regional identity and region branding This book draws a range of powerful conclusions about the path dependency of particular forms for post industrial regional identity in former regions of heavy industry It highlights both commonalities and differences in the strategies employed with regard to the regions industrial heritage This book will appeal to lecturers students and scholars in the fields of heritage management industrial studies and cultural geography
