Abstract: The authors examined the effects of a 12-week, low-intensity, low-impact exercise program on the health-related quality of life of older adults. The program was designed to improve physical and mental health, and to reduce the risk of falls. The program was evaluated using a pre-test, post-test, and follow-up design. The results of the study showed that the program had a positive effect on the health-related quality of life of older adults. The program was found to be effective in improving physical and mental health, and in reducing the risk of falls. The program was also found to be effective in improving the health-related quality of life of older adults. The program was found to be effective in improving the health-related quality of life of older adults.
