Identifying Emotions

This is about the various states (sometimes triggered) that people can feel. It is a useful study because it enables you to read people, or people themselves, to see how they feel. It is important to know that all these feelings are normal and you're not alone in feeling them.

There are over 1000 or more about 20-30 different words that can describe emotions, or feelings. Here are some of the feelings you can describe:

Two hearts in the top left corner and a rainbow in the top right corner.

Your Story

We want to hear your story, the things that have happened, and how you feel about them. You can write it and we'll be in - whatever words right for you.

Your friends

1. Write their names, use their picture boxes to think of a characteristic. You can start by answering these questions:

- 1. What's their name?
- 2. What's their colour, size, hair?
- 3. What are their interests or hobbies?

Don't forget to draw a smiley face when you think about thoughts they express.

Hey there!

Remember to your special assignment? This needs to put the way that we can use it to help you to get the most out of it. We are going to be using it to help you to get the most out of it. We are going to be using it to help you to get the most out of it.

Why We Need This Assignment?

We need to use this to help you to get the most out of it. We are going to be using it to help you to get the most out of it. We are going to be using it to help you to get the most out of it.

What We Need to Do:

We need to use this to help you to get the most out of it. We are going to be using it to help you to get the most out of it. We are going to be using it to help you to get the most out of it.

We need to use this to help you to get the most out of it. We are going to be using it to help you to get the most out of it. We are going to be using it to help you to get the most out of it.
