Frequently Asked Questions about the Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights, 2014 In June 2011, the United Nations Human Rights Council endorsed the Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights, establishing them as the global expected standard of conduct with regard to business impact on human rights. The Guiding Principles were developed based on six years of research and global multi-stakeholder consultations. These Frequently Asked Questions aim to support stakeholder uptake and understanding of the Guiding Principles. This publication is not intended as an operational guide and does not change or add to the provisions of the Guiding Principles, but it provides additional background explanation to support a full understanding of their meaning and intent. Power, Procedure, Participation and Legitimacy in Global Sustainability Norms Karin Buhmann, 2017-08-02

Globalisation of the market law and politics contributes to a diversity of transnational sustainability problems whose solutions exceed the territorial jurisdictional limits of nation states in which their effects are generated or occur The rise of the business sector as a powerful global actor with a claim to participation and potential contributions as well as adverse impacts sustainability complicates the regulatory challenge Recent decades efforts to govern transitions towards sustainability through public or hybrid regulation display mixed records of support and results In combination these issues highlight the need for insights on what conditions multi stakeholder regulation for a process that balances stakeholder power and delivers results perceived as legitimate by participants and broader society This book responds to that need Based on empirical experience on public private regulation of global sustainability concerns and theoretical perspectives on transnational regulation the book proposes a new theory on collaborative regulation This theory sets out a procedural approach for multi stakeholder regulation of global sustainability issues in a global legal and political order to provide for legitimacy of process and results It takes account of the claims to participation of the private sector as well as civil society organisations and the need to balance power disparities

Challenging Territoriality in Human Rights Law Wouter Vandenhove, 2015-06-19

Human rights have traditionally been framed in a vertical perspective with the duties of States confined to their own citizens or residents Interpretations of international human rights treaties tend either to ignore or downplay obligations beyond this territorial space This edited volume challenges the territorial bias of mainstream human rights law It argues that with increased globalisation and the impact of international corporations organisations and non State actors human rights law will become less relevant if it fails to adapt to changing realities in which States are no longer the only leading actor Bringing together leading scholars in the field the book explores potential applications of international human rights law in a multi duty bearer setting The first part of the book examines the current state of the human rights obligations of foreign States corporations and international financial institutions looking in particular at the ways in which they address questions of attribution and distribution of obligations and responsibility The second part is geared towards the identification of common principles that may underpin a human rights legal regime that incorporates obligations of foreign States as well as of non State actors As a marker of important progress in understanding what lies ahead for integrating foreign States and non State actors in the human rights dutybearer regime this book will be of great interest to scholars and practitioners of international human rights law public international law and international relations

International Investment Law and

Globalization Jean-Michel Marcoux,2018-09-03 In a context of neoliberal globalization have the processes of elaboration and implementation of foreign investors responsibilities by intergovernmental organizations reached the realm of legality Using an analytical framework and a methodology that combines international law with international relations this book provides a twofold answer to this question First it demonstrates that the normative integration of foreign investors responsibilities in international investment law is fragmented and consistent with the interests of the most powerful actors Second while using the interactional theory of international law to assess the normative character of several international instruments elaborated and implemented by intergovernmental organizations it highlights the sense of obligation that each instrument generates The analysis demonstrates that such a codification process is marked by relations of power and has resulted in several social norms with relatively few legal norms

Towards a Business and Human Rights Treaty Si Chen, 2015 A new wave of international discussion on an international binding instrument on business and human rights was triggered by the proposal for a business and human rights treaty by some states originally represented by Ecuador and South Africa Through its resolution A/HRC/RES/26/9 in June 2014 the Human Rights Council decided to establish an open ended intergovernmental working group to elaborate an international legally binding instrument to regulate in international human rights law the activities of transnational corporations and other business enterprises Despite the Council mandate the debate on a binding approach still continues and the necessity of a business human rights treaty remains controversial This thesis addresses a three fold research question on the proposal of a business and human rights treaty 1 What is the state of

play in the ongoing debate of a binding proposal 2 Is it necessary to elaborate a business and human rights treaty 3 If one is deemed necessary how should a business and human rights treaty be formulated The research question is answered by a combination of methods including empirical research literature review and legal analysis The approach of this thesis is both empirical and legal In Chapter Two this thesis takes a close observation of the ongoing debate on the proposal of a binding instrument on business and human rights In Chapter Three this thesis conducts a comprehensive examination on the necessity of a business and human rights treaty It evaluates the necessity of a treaty from four significant issues of international legalization in the field of business and human rights These issues are the legal need of a business and human rights treaty in international legal framework the political as well as legal achievability of a treaty on business and human rights and the potential implications of elaborating a treaty on business and human rights In Chapter Four this thesis provides a constructive proposal on the specific legal formulation of a business and human rights treaty The proposal discusses four general issues including the duty bearers scope extraterritoriality and function of a business and human rights treaty The proposal suggests seven of the core provisions of a business and human rights treaty and provides commentaries for each provision Firstly it is shown that while the necessity of a business and human rights treaty is still a core concern in the ongoing debate potential issues have emerged Further it is deemed that it is necessary to elaborate a business and human rights treaty Finally it is suggested that a binding instrument on business and human rights should be a framework convention on strengthening the state obligation to protect human rights against abuses by businesses Human Rights Obligations of Business Surya Deva,David Bilchitz,2013-11-21 In recent years the UN Human Rights Council has approved the Respect Protect and Remedy Framework and endorsed the Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights These developments have been welcomed widely but do they adequately address the challenges concerning the human rights obligations of business This volume of essays engages critically with these important developments The chapters revolve around four key issues the process and methodology adopted in arriving at these documents the source and justification of corporate human rights obligations the nature and extent of such obligations and the implementation and enforcement thereof In addition to highlighting several critical deficits in these documents the contributing authors also outline a vision for the twenty first century in which companies have obligations to society that go beyond the responsibility to respect human rights
