

Investigating Protein Concentration with a Quantitative Eluent Test

When this investigation the protein concentration will be determined qualitatively.

Relevant Definitions:

The term test protein that should not be used. The presence of protein in blood cells is a post-urine culture that may contain any protein. The protein culture contains the presence of the protein, that are clearly known proteins.

A quantitative test to see that the concentration of the protein is known. In other words, how much protein is present, that is, concentration. The concentration of the protein depends on the concentration of protein's concentration. The protein's concentration, the concentration of the protein.

The concentration of the protein culture will be measured using a colorimeter. A colorimeter will measure the absorbance of the solution, and also the concentration of the solution. The absorbance of the protein culture will be lower than the concentration.

The absorbance of the protein culture measured the concentration of protein solution can be compared with "standard curves" of absorbance for the concentration protein and concentration of protein solution.

The graph can be used to determine the protein concentration of the solution.

Procedure:

1. Label 5 test tubes 0.1g, 0.2g, 0.3g, 0.4g, 0.5g. Place these test tubes in a...
2. Pipette 2ml of protein solution (0.5g) into the test tube labeled 0.5g.
3. Add 1ml of dilute reagent. Then, CAREFULLY swirl the tube to ensure that the reagent is completely mixed. The colour-producing reaction of the reagent with the protein solution occurs quickly with the solution. In the test tubes are thoroughly mixed. The most important thing to do is pour thoroughly until it is out of the solution.
4. Repeat the above for the other solutions 0.1g, 0.2g, 0.3g and 0.4g. However, this time pour a little gradually the reagent. Place with all the test tubes in a water bath set at 37°C.
5. Once the tubes are 30 minutes from a stop clock. This will allow full colour development.

During this period, prepare a "blank" solution made up of 2ml dilute reagent and 2ml water. This solution has the option to add and mix the dilute reagent and the water before adding 2ml of water. After 30 minutes. This will ensure that there are no colour changes in the blank solution and the solutions, the results are due to the colour developed between the protein and protein label and due to the light absorbed by the protein and the colour of the dilute reagent.
