

Apple Tree

Way up high in the apple tree,
Five little apples smiled at me.

I shook that tree
as hard as I could,
And, down came those apples. Mmm, were they good!

The Apple Tree Mrs Inge a. Danaher,2015-12-03 Many years ago as I was pondering a problem I felt the urge to pick up a pen and write Out came something vaguely resembling a poem At least it was verse that rhymed When I finished and read it I realized that from somewhere inside of me had come an answer to the issue that was troubling me To me it felt like an answered prayer and for many years this is how I meditated I called these early poems my prayer poems Sometimes I would share them with family and friends and often people especially my mother would say I should write them in a book as others may also benefit from them or enjoy them Over the years I added other type of poems to these early prayer poems and I found poetic verse a great way to express my feelings about the world around me about issues about the people that came across my life about love about humor but mostly I wrote to help myself deal with situations When illness struck I suddenly had more time and decided to turn this into a proper hobby I found these poems a great way to communicate But the rest of my story is in the introduction of my book I will leave you with a poem and hope that you enjoy the others in my book The Sunset In the far horizon Near the edge of the ocean Glows the sky a brilliant red Evening s glorious gift Before the dark of night Overshadows the land once more Relaxing on the warm sand Glad to be alive of the world of lived experience that a poem tries to apprehend Hass's work is grounded in the beauty of the physical world. His familiar landscapes—San Francisco, the northern California coast, the Sierra high country—are vividly alive in his work. His themes include art, the natural world, desire, family, life, the life between lovers, the violence of history, and the power and inherent limitations of language. He is a poet who is trying to say as fully as he can what it is like to be alive in his place and time. His style, formed in part by American modernism, in part by his long apprenticeship as a translator of the Japanese haiku masters and Czeslaw Milosz, combines intimacy of address, a quick intelligence, a virtuosic skill with long sentences, intense sensual vividness, and a light touch.
