Business Training and Commercial Education (Classic Reprint) Glen Levin

Swiggett, 2015-07-07 Excerpt from Business Training and Commercial Education This is due in a large measure to the fact that business training came as a late entrant to high school and college The period of readjustment in accord with the established academic procedure in respect to admissions and graduations was and is coincident with a period of industrial and commercial expansion the course of which has not always been under economic control Sensing the economic gain to ensue through the correlation of training for and actual conduct of business business educators and business men have endeavored in larger numbers and throughout a larger territory than ever before to obtain a program of coordinated educational opportunity and business need which would give to business a natural movement of supply from the schools of boys and girls to men and women efficiently trained for the various departments and specific tasks of business. The motive of this approach has been cordial but not always timely and has sometimes been ill advised. Always the latter when the fundamental purpose of the public schools in a democracy has not been kept clearly a guiding principle in the establishment of special training courses. The division of labor in the field of distribution has not always been apparent as in that of production. The unit cost in marketing involves factors yet intangible. It is therefore difficult involving uncertainty and change to functionalize business training courses, the major, nay the sole purpose of which is to train for specific tasks of business. Experimentation therefore in this special field of educational endeavor is more evident in vocational business training than in the broader and more general aspects of liberal commercial education. And this is rightly so. We live in an economic era. Inter and intra national affairs are largely determined by economic advantages and these are in a large degree conditioned by the magnitude of scale and measure of efficiency in management of industry and commerce. The need of constantly improved methods for increased production and salvage in transportation, marketing and financing no matter in what field of development has never been more apparent. Nor has there ever been a greater need for trained labor whether of head or hand. The consciousness of this need has given to business education a position of commanding interest in business as well as in education. Commercial organizations, National, State and local, place increasing emphasis on training and education for business and commerce. Programs in training for several types of business service similar in purpose and procedure to that of the American Institute of Banking have been developed and extended by other organized business service groups. For example, the National Association of Credit Men has planned a course of study to be offered by cooperative arrangement in the larger urban universities. Lyon, 2017-09-12 Excerpt from Education for Business This volume was prepared with the hope expressed in the preface to the first edition that it might be of service to general readers and to students in institutions giving teacher training If the general reader had been the only reader contemplated the clear expression of a point of view would have been the only matter of primary importance But to make the book valuable to students the evidence was laid out in some detail concerning attitudes were expressed questions interpolated and material otherwise introduced for the constant discussion and reaction of class work These introductions into the skeleton of thought make it possible for the student to develop a view through his own thinking but they constitute something of an interference to the reader who wishes to see quickly approach and conclusions only There has therefore been added in this edition a final chapter which is something of a sketch of the book as a whole It is hoped that this chapter may serve the general reader as a certification of viewpoint and the student as a summary as well As the title of the chapter indicates there is also the belief that this summarized viewpoint may aid educators in applying the ideas of the book to practical situations About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works
