1. Phagocytosis: Many cells have vesicles and organelles that can move independently and phagocytose bacteria (or other small objects).
2. Pinocytosis: Specialized structures (pinocytosis vesicles) can take in liquids.
3. Receptor-mediated endocytosis: Specialized proteins on the surface of a cell can bind to specific molecules, then vesicles form around the receptor and bring it in.
4. The Endosome Pathway: The vesicles containing the phagocytized materials move throughout the cell, using vesicles to move the organelles to different parts of the cell. Vesicles can also move between different organelles, where they bring up proteins or small molecules, maybe for the organelle to use.
5. Exocytosis: Many organelles or vesicles that originated from or originated in other parts of the cell can move back to the cell surface and expel their contents or move to another cell. Vesicles can also move from one part of the cell to another part of the cell.
6. Autophagy: Cells can engulf their own organelles and break them down to use the materials for energy.
