

Continuous Flow of Cleaner, Drier Air for High-Air-Demand Applications

Continuous air flow from Bendix

Bendix pioneered the first air dryer nearly 30 years ago, and ever since, our air dryers have been the industry standard. Now there's a new way to provide a continuous flow of clean, dry air for high-air-demand applications: the Bendix® EverFlow™ air dryer control module.

Bulk haulers, transit buses, and other high-air-usage applications, such as central tire inflation have special air supply needs. These vehicles require a continuous, uninterrupted supply of clean, dry air. While normal air dryers work well, their need to periodically stop and purge moisture doesn't make them suitable for high-air-demand applications. For these vehicles, there's the Bendix EverFlow™ module — an air dryer control module that works with a pair of Bendix® soft seat AD-9™, AD-IP™ or AD-IS™ air dryers to continuously provide drier, filtered air for applications with high-air-demand.

Tag team performance

Unlike normal air dryers that periodically stop to purge moisture, the EverFlow™ air dryer control module keeps airflow constant by connecting two of our popular Bendix soft seat AD-9, AD-IP or AD-IS air dryers with an electronic control module that utilizes ABS modulator technology. The EverFlow™ air dryer control module helps prevent contamination of the air system by allowing one dryer to provide dry air to the system while the other dryer purges. While one unit filters and dries the air, the other purges the collected moisture. Then the controller switches between the two to repeat the process. In this way, air flows continuously through the system in an uninterrupted supply.

Cleaner and more efficient

The Bendix® EverFlow™ module delivers clean, dry air faster than other system options. In fact, the EverFlow module is designed to unload almost 10 percent faster than existing, competitive continuous flow dryers. This 10 percent difference means that in low pressure applications, such as pressure assisted bulk offload, offload times may be fast enough to allow for one extra load / offload cycle a day, which means increased productivity for your fleet.
