Ultra-Low Energy Domain-Specific Instruction-Set Processors Francky Catthoor, Praveen Raghavan, Andy Lambrechts, Murali Jayapala, Angeliki Kritikakou, Javed Absar, 2010-08-05 Modern consumers carry many electronic devices like a mobile phone digital camera GPS PDA and an MP3 player The functionality of each of these devices has gone through an important evolution over recent years with a steep increase in both the number of features as in the quality of the services that they provide However providing the required compute power to support an uncompromised combination of all this functionality is highly non trivial Designing processors that meet the demanding requirements of future mobile devices requires the optimization of the embedded system in general and of the embedded processors in particular as they should strike the correct balance between flexibility energy efficiency and performance In general a designer will try to minimize the energy consumption as far as needed for a given performance with a sufficient flexibility However achieving this goal is already complex when looking at the processor in isolation but in reality the processor is a single component in a more complex system In order to design such complex system successfully critical decisions during the design of each individual component should take into account effect on the other parts with a clear goal to move to a global Pareto optimum in the complete multi dimensional exploration space In the complex global design of battery operated embedded systems the focus of Ultra Low Energy Domain Specific Instruction Set Processors is on the energy aware architecture exploration of domain specific instruction set processors and the co optimization of the datapath architecture foreground memory and instruction memory organisation with a link to the required mapping techniques or compiler steps at the early stages of the design By performing an extensive energy breakdown experiment for a complete embedded platform both energy and performance bottlenecks have been identified together with the important relations between the different components Based on this knowledge architecture extensions are proposed for all the bottlenecks

Service Science John Maleyeff, 2020-08-03 To remain relevant in today's world practitioners should presume that they have two jobs first to do their work effectively so that they provide value to the organization second to improve how the work is done so that their organization remains competitive This book offers clear guidance to excel at this ubiquitous second job Informed by an appreciation that most personnel that work in any firm even firms that are manufacturing oriented routinely provide services as a key element of their jobs this book explains how to provide and improve internal customer service regardless of industry or role It illustrates the common features or service process DNA while providing a diverse set of examples to enhance understanding Written by a pioneer in the development of principles and methodologies that address services in a structured and distinctive manner this book stresses that service processes are distinctly different from manufacturing processes Rigorous and practical this book will appeal to students and professionals alike in business hospitality industrial management public health and other fields Online resources include Excel files that act as templates to help with quantitative analysis routines
